He is also survived by his brother, Thomas Moskal. He was preceded in death by his son-in-law, Dan, and by his parents, Thomas and Anna Moskal.

Stan worked for the Illuminating Company in the electrical testing lab, where his skill, reliability, and practical knowledge were valued by those who worked alongside him. He approached his work with care and intelligence, and he was known throughout his life as someone who could help anyone with anything. Outside of work, Stan embraced life with enthusiasm and energy. He loved tennis and had a deep appreciation for the water, whether he was wind surfing, sailing, or simply being near water. He also enjoyed skiing and snowboarding, and he found happiness in the excitement and freedom of active pursuits. His adventurous nature was matched by a warm and giving heart, and he was known for being generous, loving, and deeply devoted to the people and animals around him.

Stan’s family and friends will remember him for the many ways he made life brighter for those he loved. He was a steady presence, a patient teacher, and a man who gave freely of his time, his talents, and his affection. He had a special way of making others feel supported and cared for, and
