Terry had a smile that could light up a room and was a friend to everyone. She was nicknamed, "The Hallmark Queen" by all those that loved her because of her joy for sending Hallmark cards to mark any occasion, or simply because she wanted to let someone know she was thinking of them. She could always brighten anyone's day with her smile and her terrific Irish wit. Terry was always so extremely proud of her Irish heritage. She instilled her love of that heritage to her family who will proudly and with great loving memories, carry on all their Irish traditions.

Terry and her late husband, Paul, ran their own advertising agency (Graham Advertising) and retired in 2003. They traveled to many wonderful destinations and had a particular love for beaches and warm weather. Together with her husband, she contributed to many charities and always found time for others. Her true devotion was her family and spending time together. She made every get together special, just by adding her special touch of thoughtfulness. Her life revolved around her family and her love changed lives. She had a generous heart with immeasurable love for her family and many friends.
